at the Church of the Disciples. The demonstration of the Masonic fraternity yesterday ever the remains of the late James L. Orr was brilliant beyond precedent in New York. The body lay in state in the City Hall three days, and was viewed by thousands. Yesterday morning the throng increased, and at o'clock the Masons found it difficult to complete the preparations for the procession. The Park in front of the Hall was thronged at 12 o'clock, at which hour the commanderies began to report to Deputy Grand Master Thorne in the Governor's room. Details of ten men from each were formed by Em. Com. John T. Conover into a special guard of honor to escort the reinto a special guard of nonor to escort the remains to the church. The acting grand officers of the day were: Elwood E. Thorne, Grand Master; James E. Morison, Deputy Grand Master; wm. T. Woodruff, Grand L. W.; Dr. White, Grand J. W.; Rabert H. At I.30 the son of the late Russian Minister, Mr. Lawrence Orr, and his friend, Col. Childs of South Carelina, arrived on the plaza in a carriage. The York Commandery of Knights Templar, numbering thirty-five, received them with open ranks and swords at a salute. Keating's band in the vestibule of the Hall played a dirge while Mr. Orr and the Knights ascended the starcase. Soon afterward Major-Gen. Hancock and Capt. Wharton of his staff arrived, and were introduced to the leading Masons and Mr. Orr. Senior's hearse drove up in a few minutes, drawn by six white horses, led by six colored men.

In the west room were assembled ex-Mayors Gunther and Westervelt, Mayor Havemeyer, the Commissioners of Police, Charities and Correction, Judges of Courts, and the Common Council. Some delay was caused by the non-arrival of the New Jersey commanderies. A city commandery was sent to the ferry as an escort, and, when they arrived, the casket was taken up by ten Knights of the Morton Commandery No. 4 and carried down to the hearse, Keating's band playing a dirze the while. Knights formed a square around the hearse, and the column was ready to move a few minutes before 3 o'clock. THE DEPARTURE FROM THE HALL.

On Thursday morning, a few minutes after the opening of business on 'Change, a short, thickset man, with florid face and a small moustache and side whiskers, shuffled into Messrs. Osgood & Co.'s banking house in Broad street, and presenting a letter of credit for $37,000, asked for its equivalent in gold.

The stranger wore patched boots and a paper collar, but was otherwise faultlessly dressed He described himself as J. H. Horton of Laneaster, Pa. He handed his letter of credit to Mr. Prince, the business manager, who politely

Mr. Prince, the business manager, who politely requested him to take a seat on the office sofa while he perused it. The letter was from S. P. Peterson & Co. of 39 South street, Philadelphia, correspondents of Osgood & Co.

Commodore Frank Osgood, Mr. George Osgood, and some others were in the banking office. He entered into conversation with them regarding the object of his visit to the city, and while he was talking Detective Elder walked in and took a seat by his side. Horton said that he had come to New York to speculate, and that he intended to draw all the money called for by the draft and put it into gold, as he anticipated a smash up among the farmers of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Prince objected to making the gold purchases until he received the purchase money, whereupon Horton, in seeming indignation suggested that the firm telegraph to Peterson & Co. and procure a telegraphic transfer. The firm subsequently telegraphed as follows:

New York, June 12, 1873.

Messes, P. S. Peterson & Co., Philodelphia.

Have transfer of sum in Horton's credit made through Drexe. & Co. to us in cipher.

The transfer was promptly made; afterward the firm bought $25.780 in coin and gold certificates, and handed them to Horton, who nodded to Detective Elder and the others in the office and went out. As he went out a broker said to Commodore Osgood that the man's paper collar and mended boots made him have the look of a horse-thief.

to Horton at 11.30 A. M., and at noon the fillowing dispatch was received in the banking house:

Osgood & Co., New York.

Bon't pay any money over to Horton. We have discovered that the checks and drafts we have cashed for him are lorgeries. Catch him if you can.

A member of the Philadelphia firm arrived in the city vesterday, and explained the character of Horton's fraud. Some time ago he opened an account with Reed, McGrame & Co., bankers, of Lancaster. On the 28th of May last that firm gave him, 200 shares of Pennsylvania Central Railroad stock in exchange for 200 shares of Reading.

On Tuesday last he attempted a similar exchange with another banking office in Lancaster, but the latter, having its suspicions aroused from certain marks on the Reading stock, refused to transact business with him. They ascertained that the stock had been raised from one to one hundred shares by the extending of the figures.

The discovery quickly reached Reed, McGrame & Co., and they learned that the shares they had taken in exchange were also raised. In the meantime Horton had started for Philadelphia, unconscious of his danger. Telegrams were sent to that city, but too late to intercent him, as he had started for this city still knorant that his frauds had been exposed.

Mr. George Osgood told the Philadelphia banker that if he had telegraphed direct to the Stock Exchange Horton's operations would have become known in time to effect his arrest. The only victims by his swindling are Reed. McGrame & Co. Horton is said to have lived in Lancaster several years.

An Escape from Blackwell's Island-A Des-

Yesterday morning Joseph H. Clark, who says he lives at 10 Lewis street, was discharged from Blackwell's Island, having finished a term for larceny. He procured a row boat, and at 2 o'clock in the afternoon went back to the island to assist in the escape of John Burns, known as Piper Burns." Keeper Alexander Ewell and another saw the two men crossing the river, and started in pursuit. They were unable to overtake the furitives, although both were wounded, the officers having shot at them several times.

It is believed that he crept into the sewer, although Detective Lynans was subsequently informed that he was concealed beneath a heap of earth on the wharf. Clark was wounded in the left thigh, and he says Burns was shot in the side. Clark was taken to court, committed, and then sent to Bellevue Hospital.

Burns formerly lived in Thirteenth street, in the Seventeeuth Ward, but for a few years past he has lived on Avenue A. near Eighteenth street. He has never been arrested for robbery, but his boon companions are thieves. He was never knewn to do a day's work, although over thirty years old and having a family to support. The police known him as a "political bruiser," one who makes himself valuable to pot-house politicians in controlling primaries and polling places by brutal force. For these services he has been paid with sinecures.

"Burns, says an old policeman who knows his history," is one who will put a bullet through your heart, or rip you open with a knife, and laugh while doing it. He has shot and stabled more men than any other desperado in the city, but has always been protected by political influence. It was for a felonious assault ne was sent up this time. He was sentenced for a year, and has been there but a short time."

THE SKIMMERS OF THE AIR SOME RARE AMERICAN BIRDS AND THEIR PECULIARITIES.

Burlingame's Carrier Pigeons - Mr. Gill's Great Flock-The Carrier Pigeon's Astounding Flight-The Bird Fauclers and their Pemarkable Collections.

The rapid growth in the breed of pigeons s signalized by the great increase in their importation from England and the enormous prices that are paid for them by American, especially New York, fanciers. The leading importers of New York are run down with orders for all species of the fancy-flying stock. The demand is more particularly for pouters, car-riers, almond tumblers, barbs, owls, fantalis, turbits, nuns, jacobins (commonly called ruffle necks), magpies, swallows, balls, beards, and

THE LONG-WINDED POUTER. Pouters are of various colors, and what is usually known as pied-i. c., well bred-are uniformly marked blue and white, ye'low and white, black and white, and red and white. These birds belong to a fancy stock, and are of no utility whatever save for their great beauty and the peculiar way in which they puff out their breasts. They are enabled to retain the air which they inhale until they are on the verge of bursting. They are proud of their balloon like appearance, and have been known to allow themselves to suffocate rather than to emit the wind from their chest. They strut like a fullblown alderman after a six o'clock dinner; their blown alderman after a six o'clock dinner; their size is somewhat greater than that of the ordinary pigeon, and their value $100 a pair.

The carrier pigeons to be valuable must be of one color throughout. They are principally blacks, duns, blues, reds, and whites. Their necks are of great length, their beaks are long, and there is a peculiar narrowness of their skulls and warting around the eyes, which, while it does not add to their beauty, greatly enhances their value. These bigeons are worth from $10 neir value. These pigeons are worth from $10 $15 a pair, and belong to the fancy stock.

Barbs are of one color throughout. They have a short thick white beak; are very wide across the forehead, and have a circular warting around eyes of deepest red.

Owls are of two kinds. English and African. The latter differ from the former in size, being much smaller. They are lively, cheerful birds, always on the move, and are the favorites at the Oak lane poultry yards of Philadelpnia, where are collected some of the finest specimens in the country.

The turbits are very beautiful birds, and are of nany colorings. One variety has a white body, ap on the head and frill on the breast; the ving being of various colors, such as blue, black, ellow, red, and sliver.

Bails or baid-headed tumblers are very pretty birds, good flyers and excellent performers. They have frequently been known to fly in a circle for hours consecutively.

Beard tumblers are similar to the "bails" with this exception; that instead of a white head, they have a white mark under the beak orthroat, which resembles a beard, hence their name.

Inside tumblers derive their name from the fact that they tumble whenever they are in a room, and some of them have this propensity so strongly developed that they are frequently rendered too helpless by their exertions to rise from the ground.

As interesting anecdore.

A gentleman, well-known as a fancier, residing in New York, was the owner of a fine pair of inside tumblers, who were given to this peculiar exercise so strongly that he was compelled to keep them confined in close cages that they might not do themselves serious injury. One day, through the carclessness of the attendant, they escaped from their prison, and flying through a window into the yard attached to the house began their singular performances under a shed. Raising them cives as high as the shed would permit them they dashed with the greatest force that it was possible for them to command against the ground. Nor did they cease until they were dead.

A TERRIBLE FASCINATION.

Fanciers think that the pigeons become dazed when above the ground, and are tempted to huri themselves down as a man is frequently tempted to spring from a high eminence when fascinated by the terrible guif beneath him. Mr. Burlinggene, a prominent bird fancier of New York, relates some interesting anecdotes regarding the celebrated Antwerp carrier pigeon, the species that were used during the Franco-Prussian war.

Two of these nigeons were some time ago sold to a gentleman in Providence, R. I., who in turn sold them to a gentleman in Philadelphia where they were taken and confined in a dark room for the period of four months, that they might forget the direction to their former home. During their confinement they bred, and when by chance they were released they rose in the air, and after sweeping around for half an hour in a circle they directed their course toward Providence, and arrived home safely a few hours afterward. These pigeons are never lost.

OTHER CHARACTERISTICS. When they fall to satisfy themselves that they are pur-uing the correct course, they return to their last starting point. They are very swift when on the wing, generally making eighty, and sometimes one hundred miles in an hour. They are seldom trained, but derive their habits from memory of location and instinct; and are of little service save when they are taken from their homes when young, and permitted to fly from place to place under restraint.

There is a carrier bigeon in the possession of Mr. Burlingame that he purchased some months ago from a gentleman in the northern section of the city. For five months after the purchase, the bird, whose wings were kept constantly clipped, was confined in a close box. One morning the pigeon was missed, and an investigation of his prison furnished singular proofs of its sagnetiv. Using its bill as an auger, it had by dint of perseverance worm away the inner woodwork of the box, and when its barrier was so delicate that the presure of a finger would have broken it, the bird threw itself upon it and burst into the open air. When they fail to satisfy themselves that they returned it to Mr. Buringame. It had arrived at his house on the very day of its escape, within the hour in which it was missed.

The prices of these pigeons, though they are of greater utility than those of any other species, is far below the sums demanded for the "fancy stock." Thy rarely realize more than $6 apiece, while the worthless beauties that can do nothing but strut and cackle, are thought to be bargains at from $5.5 to $100.

Mr. Burlingame, when asked whether the money paid for these fancy pigeons was not money extravagantly used, didn't seem to think it was. The business of buying and selling had always been a profitable one to him; and though he had yet on his hands both tumblers and magpies that he had never been able to dispose of, he had realized more than thrice their value by the sale of their young. He has had pigeons in his possession for fifteen years that had been the progenitors of numerous families, and that were as hearty and thrifty when he sold them as when he first made their aequaintance.

THE PIGEON'S PARADISE. THE PIGEON'S PARADISE.

Mr. Thomas Gill, of Staten Island, had owned at least 20 fancy pigeons at one time. The flock—an unusually large one—embraced nearly every species, ranging from the beautiful pouter to the dainty fantail. Though they were all collected together, the harmony with which they united their various characteristics, and endured each other's moral failines was touching as the sight of their snow white and sliver tinged feathers was beautiful to look upon. The tumblers in this pizeon colony, while they rolled around and turned somersaults in the air, appreciated too highly the comforts of a good home to commit suicide by dashing their bodies too violently upon the ground.

bodies too violently upon the ground.

THE RIVALS.

Mr. Gill once owned a pair of tumbler rigeons that he called the rivals. One Sunday morning he noticed that they would rise to a giddy height that would make them appear like a speck in a sky, and then fail in a straight line, like a shot, until they were within a few yards of the ground, just so that they could recover themselves by spreading their wings, and keep from being dashed to the ground. They were a male and female. Finally they flew so high and dropped so low that the male was dashed to pieces. After this the female pined away, and only lived a few weeks.

THOSE WHO DOTE ON PIGEONS.

THOSE WHO DOTE ON PIGEONS.

Prominent among the fanciers of the "high class" of pigeons are Messrs. Colell of Williamsburgh, Speare. Scheld, Purvis, Biegel, and Wm. Simpson, Jr., of New York. These gentlemen spend each from $500 to $3,000 annually in the purchase of pigeons, and spend the greater part of their leisure in admiring and training them.

The Comptroller goes further and says that most of the matter pretended to be advertised was in no sense of the term advertisements. The bulk of the matter claimed to be published as advertisements was, he says, news paragraphs which all newspapers are anxious to print. For instance, Murtagh had rendered bills for publishing the public debt statements, charging therefor 25 cents per line. The public debt statements are considered sufficiently important to be telegraphed all over the country by the Associated Press. In like manner he had charged for publishing notices of the movements of the Secretary and other officials.

This bill of $12,00 was for the Treasury Department, and personal notices of the movements of the Secretary and other officials.

This bill of $12,00 was for the Treasury Department advertisements alone. The public can from this obtain a faint idea of what is paid for as advertisements in this and other Washington journals by the other departments of the Government—the Navy Department for instance. The National Republican is the especial organ and champlon of Secor Robeson, and of course he will order all such bills to be paid.

THE CITY AUTHORITIES SHAKING

FISTS AT EACH OTHER. A Chance for the Incumbent Police Magis trates to Grow Gray in Office—The Mayor Stumping the Aldermen, and the Alder-men Stumping the Mayor.

The Mayor enjoyed a comparative rest from his official labors yesterday. He came to his office about noon and went away at 2 o'clock to attend the funeral of Minister Orr. The board appointed to award the contract for the publishing of the City Record met in the Mayor's office at 1 o'clock. Mr. P. W. Rhodes, the lowest bidder, was told that if he could furnish bonds in the required amount, and if he would sign a contract which the Corporation Counsel was directed to draw, the contract would be awarded to him. If he fails to comply with these conditions it is to be awarded to the next lowest bid The award is to be made to-day.

The thirsty politicians who daily frequent the City Hall talked of nothing yesterday but the new deadlock between the Mayor and Aldermen. It was believed that the Aldermen had at last got the upper hand of the Mayor. A city official who was in the crowd said that the action of the Aldermen was the result of a new combination. Some of them said he found on examining the Police Justices' bill that if they had the ten nominations before them they could act upon them, so that they might fix their term of office. They went to work immediately to form a combination. On comparing notes it was found that many of them had can-didates. The leaders of the conspiracy taking advantage of this, easily persuaded enough of the Aldermen to constitute a majority to join them, and the combination was formed. HOW THE JOB WAS PUT UP.

HOW THE JOB WAS PUT UP.

In reply to a request by a by-stander to tell the names of the leaders of the conspiracy, the official said: "The job was put up by the Tammany Alderman Monheimer. The Tammany Alderman wish the Mayor to nominate Justices Ledwith and Hogan, and Alderman Monheimer desires that Justice Bixby's name should be sent in. President Vance, and Aldermen Billings and Cooper joined the combination because they have candidates. None of the other Aldermen were asked to join. Aldermen Kehr and Koch, however, voted with the members of the combination. It is supposed that they did so, because they went to see whether the Mayor will nominate any Germans."

so, because they went to see whether the Mayor will nominate any Germans."

The Aldermen who are in the combination are overjoyed with their success. They say that they mean business this time, and that the Mayor cannot tire them out. One of them said yesterday, in reply to the question when they intend to rescind the resolution postponing action on the nominations, that they never would back down from the stand which they had taken. "Suppose the Mayor should get his back up and refuse to send in any more names?" said the questioner. "You know his time is not limited."

limited."
"In that case the incumbent Justices will remain in office," said the Alderman. THE ALDERMEN'S SELF-CONFIDENCE. "But the Aldermen will have to shoulder the esponsibility if they are retained," said the

"Very well," said the city father. "Let them shoulder the responsibility. They are able to bear it. I guess the people will not find much fault with their action. We have obeyed orders long enough. It is high time that we asserted our rights." WHAT THE MAYOR THINKS OF THEM.

what the Mayor thinks of them.

The Mayor takes the situation very coolly. When informed on Thursday of the passage of the resolution, he said, laughing heartily, "Foolish fellows, foolish fellows." He said yesterday that the Aldermen ought to know by this time that he would make no bargain concerning his nominations. He did not care what the Aldermen did with them. They might reject them if they pleased. But he wanted them to act on them. If they confirmed them, well and good. If they rejected them, he would send in other names. He had a large number of good names from which to make his selections. The power to make the nominations, said he, belonged to him alone, and he intended to exercise it as he saw fit. He added that if the Aldermen thought they could block him by refusing to act on his nominations already made until he sent in the other eight names, they have mistaken their man. The time in which the nominations must be made was not limited. And if they were disposed to be captious he would meet them on their own ground and withhold the other nominations indefinitely. He has determined to send in no more names until the resolution is rescinded.

The five hundred applicants for the Police

THEIR CAKE ALL DOUGH.

The five hundred applicants for the Police Justiceships looked very blue yesterday. They are afraid that the deadlock will continue until the meeting of the next Legislature. One of them said that if it was not broken before that time their cake would be all dough. He thought that the next Legislature would be Democratic, and would repeal the law. It is said, however, that a combined effort is to be made by them and their friends to break the combination of the Aldermen. Their chances of success are thought to be good, as one or two of the members of the Ring are said to be already wavering. Among the new applicants is Col. John R. Dillon. He is said to be recommended by Presdent Grant, Senator Conking, Collector Arthur, the Hon. Thomas Murphy, Aldermen V:nec, inilings, and Monhelmer, the Hon. ROBESON'S ARCTIC EXPEDITION.

The Juniata not to be Sent in Search of the Polaris - The Object of Secor Robeson's Secret Investigation.

WASHINGTON, June 13 .- Notwithstanding the semi-official statement from the Navy Department that the Juniata is to sail in search of the Polaria, it is well known here that she is to be used for entirely different purposes. The department is now negotiating for a vessel which is to be fitted up especially for the Polar seas. and no attempt will be made to rescue the icebound Polaris until this arrangement can be made. The rumors about the Juniata going or such an expedition were set affoat by Secon Robeson for the very purpose of concealing the such an expedition were set affoat by Secor Robeson for the very purpose of concealing the real use to which this Government vessel is to be put. She is to go on a plessure voyage with certain families on board her. The idea of sending such a ship as the Juniata to the Polar Sea is ridiculed by all navy officers.

The local organs of the Administration say that Secor Robeson is now engaged in digesting the evidence of Capt. Tyson and his associates, who have been examined in secret, and some time next week it will be made public. This means that he is making up for publication such portions of the testimony of these men as he can afford to let the public see. All the stuff that is being printed about examining these men to secure valuable scientific information is the silliest kind of bosh. If either Capt. Tyson or any of his associates who have been examined were in possession of any valuable information they could have made formal report to the Navy Department without an examination covering eight or ten days by Secor Robeson.

If this had been the only object of the examination, why conduct it in secret? It is only a tub thrown to the whale. The object is to blind the public and cover up matters that Secor Robeson fears may become known. So fearful is he of an accident of this kind, that a portion of the crew have been sent to distant points and solemnly pledged to keep their mouths shut. A similar pledge was exacted from Capt. Tyson, and for fear the Esquimaux would leak in spite of Robeson's threats, they have been sent under guard to the coast of Maine, where no outsider will be allowed to approach them. But notwithstanding these extraordinary precautions, Robeson's jobberly in the case will be found out just as it was in the celebrated Secor case.

APOLLO HALL'S INVITATION.

Corruption in the Politics of the Nation and of the State-A Dash at the Mayor-The Disfranchisement of Adopted Citizens.

The Democratic General Committee of Apollo Hall met last evening in Robinson Hall, John McCool in the chair. Motions assessing each ward committee $20 for expenses, and providing for an increase of the members of the Executive Committees of each ward to four, except the Second and Third Wards, were adopted.

The Committee on Resolutions, embracing Messrs. Benjamin Wood. Judge Alexander Spalding, William C. Barrett, Robert Borland. Samuel G. Courtney, Robert B. Nooney, Henry Murray, John McCool, and George H. Purser, reported the following, which were unanimous-ly adopted:

reported the following, which were unanimously adopted:

Wheres. The country at large has recently been shocked at the facts of rank corruption and dishonesty proven against men in official position and power in the national councils, and the committees of our State Lezislature have furnished incontrovertible evidence that leading members of the party in power in the State were under the management, control, and direction of the large moneyed corporations of the State, and that legislation was enacted for their benefit, and not for that of the people; and

Whereas, in our own city, under the specious cry of reform, we find the dead and the burned carcass of "Know Nothingsm" revived; fanutiesian and bigorry, that would have shocked the sensitive natures of the witch burners a century ago, publicly exhibited and proclaimed, and under the action and appointments of our aberal minded Mayor, the almost absolute disfranchisement of adopted citizens of every race and faith.

Resolved, That we, the regular Reform Democracy of the city of New York, call upon and invite all good Democrats who have not hitherto acted with us how to unite in inaugurating such measures, and presenting such men to the people tor legislative, Judicial, and numicipal offices as will furnish the guaranty of a return of honest democratic government in this our empire city.

THE INFECTION BROUGHT IN THE

CARS FROM PHILADELPHIA. The Death of a Sal'or in an Eldridge Street

Tenement-The Sanitary Officers Alarmed -Prompt Disinfection and Possible Safety. Within the last two weeks this city has been in great danger of a revisitation of a terrible tropical scourge. Although the health authorities have been cognizant of the danger. they have carefully withheld public mention of it, hoping to escape a possible panic. A Sun reporter saw Dr. E. H. Janes, the city Sanitary Superintendent, yesterday, and asked him whether a yellow fever patient had not just died in New York. The Superintendent was ex-tremely reticent, but learning that the reporter knew the facts he consented to tell what he knew of it. F. W. Bacon, the waiter on board the Yazoo, running from New Orleans to Havana and Philadelphia, arrived here on the cars from the latter place on the evening of the cars from the latter place on the evening of the 31st of May. He was accompanied by a friend named Deggs. They were on their way to Bacon's home in the Eastern States. Soon after they crossed Cortlandt street ferry Bacon was seized with severe pains, and his companion had him conveyed to the apartments of some acquaintances on the first floor of the five-story tenement at 7 Eldridge street.

The Doctors Purcell of Henry street were called to attend him. They found him in a raging fever. His symptoms were those of malignant jaundice, for which they treated him. On Monday morning he began to sink. His retchings were very violent, and were followed by

BLACK VOMIT.

He died at 11:30 A. M. in agony, with unmistakable signs of vellow fever. Shortly previous to his death the diagnosis led the physicians to suspect his malady, and they sent a report stating their suspicions to the Board of Health.

The announcement of vellow fever fell like a thunderboit on the Health Commissioners and the sanitary officers. They felt that a dread monster was at our doors. Competent medical inspectors were despatched to the Eldridge street dwelling, followed by the disinfecting corps. Before they arrived the patient had died. Their investigation proved conclusively that his malady was covered disinfecting wagon and rapidly driven to the morgue.

YELLOW FEVER, and they made preparations to get rid of the body as hurriedly as possible. They fairly saturated the clothing on the body with carbolic acid, and then wrapped around it the infected bedding, which they also soaked in the same liquid. The remains were then removed to a covered disinfecting wagon and rapidly driven to the morque.

After this the health officers set to work to destroy every vestige of ciothing in the room. Disinfectants were used to purify the air, and at 2 o'clock the officers began to burn a large quantity of sulphur. The doors and windows were tightly closed during the funigation, which lasted four hours.

At 6 o'clock the room was reopened, but the smoke was so dense that it was impossible to enter it for several minutes. The dead man's friend was sent to the West Bank Hospital in the lower bay. His trunk was enveloped in a cloth which had been saturated with carbolic acid. He told the sanitary officers that he and Bacon were both employed on the steamer Yazoo.

Bacon were both employed on the Yazoo.

The vessel went from Philadelphia to New Orleans, and from there to Havana, where she was kept in quarantine for a few days to prevent any spread of cholera which prevailed in Louisiana. They returned thence to Philadelphia, and were on their way home when they were ordered. and were on their way home when they were stricken.

Bacon's friend was kept under quarantine five days before it was deemed safe to discharge him. The clothing which the dead man had on and the bedding were burned in the Morzue. The body was sent to Potter's Field. The Sanitary Superintendent thinks the city had a miraculous escape.

The Custom House Shylocks Benten. An important decision has just been rendered in the Common Pleas which virtually destroys an immense business, in which over half a million of dollars has been invested. Andrew Billings is a claim agent who has for several years purchased the pay of Custom House officials, cashing it in advance for a good dis-count, sued Smith O'Brien for refusing to turn over his count, succismit of friend for relosing to turn over and pay to him after it had been duly sold to Billings and the money advanced on it. The case came up on an appeal from a decision in the Datrict Court, before Jugge Fowler, in favor of Billings. The defendant, O'Brien, appealed. The Court of Common Pleas reversed the decision, and gave judgment for O'Brien, with costs, on the ground that it was assigned the good of the public service for an employee to get his pay rolls cashed in advance, as it tempted him to indolence, and that it was also against the revenue laws of the United States, in which such transactions were expressly prohibited.
